

Ў

Belarusian Lacinka

Viecier, i sokał, i ja...

I viecier, i sokał, i ja —
Syny adnoj doli-žyccia,
Navodzim markotnyja my
I dумы, i piesni adny.

Razniaŭ viecier krylli svaje,
Lacić, i šumić, i piaje;
Piaje a svabodzie svajej,
Piaje a niavoli ludziej.

Jak viecier, i ja b tak lacieŭ,
Jak viecier, ab tym samym pieŭ,
Jak viecier, svabodny moj duch,
Choć ruki zakuty ŭ łańcuh.

Pad zorami sokał zavis,
Hladzić pa-arlinamu ŭniz.
Tam sokału svietu nie žal;
Milej jamu niebnaja dal.

Jak sokał, i ja b mknuŭ da zor:
Tam sonca, razdolle, prastor;
Biez żalu b pakinuŭ ziamlu,
I chatku, i dolu svaju.

I viecier, i sokał, i ja —
Syny adnoj doli-žyccia;
Navodzim markotnyja my
I dумы, i piesni adny.

Modern łacinka transcription. Source: Belarusian Palichka, knihi.com; collected works, vol. 1 (1995). [12]

Your reading path

Pages	Explore
2	Opening poem by Janka Kupala
5-8	Origins, writers and old editions
10-12	Letters and combinations
13-18	Ŭ, ĭ/l, softness and spelling
19-20	Words and a first reading
22-24	Practice and answers
25-26	Handwriting and a weekly rhythm
28-31	Poetry: freedom, spirit and flight
33-34	Sources and printing

An English-language companion to traditional Belarusian łacinka: ĭ/l, v, č, š, ž and ŭ. Belarusian examples keep their language; changing scripts does not automatically change spelling. This is not a passport romanization guide.

Start with the alphabet and try the exercises. Then return to the historical pages and poetry. Page numbers include the cover.

Six separate watercolor pages tell the stork's story: 4, 9, 16, 21, 27 and 32. This is an illustrated thread, not an account of the history of the alphabet.

A different script. The same language.
бyцeл / busieł / stork

Who invented it?

No single established inventor can be named. Belarusian łacinka developed as a tradition of writing Belarusian in Latin letters, rather than as one person's invention on one particular date. [1, 2]

Early surviving examples are associated with the late sixteenth century. In the seventeenth century, Belarusian dialogue was recorded in Latin script, including theatrical interludes. Polish graphic conventions strongly influenced early practice. [1]

During the nineteenth century, łacinka became an important vehicle for modern Belarusian literature. Letters and spelling conventions continued to change; today's chart cannot simply be imposed on every old edition. [1, 2]

Ask who wrote, printed, circulated and codified it.

Writers and books

Vincient Dunin-Marcinkievič: his Belarusian translation of the first two books of Pan Tadeusz appeared in Vilnius in 1859 in Latin script and was confiscated. This was the Belarusian translation, not Mickiewicz's Polish original. [1, 6]

Francišak Bahuševič: Dudka biełaruskaja appeared in Kraków in 1891 under the name Maciej Buračok. Smyk biełaruski followed in 1894 under Symon Reŭka z-pad Barysava. Both were printed in łacinka. [5]

Kastuś Kalinoŭski: editor and one of the authors of Mužyckaja praŭda (1862-1863), a newspaper printed in Latin script. His role here is chiefly that of publicist and editor. [7]

An author, an editor and a codifier play different roles.

Readers and reformers

Ciotka (Ałaiza Paškievič): the publisher's advertisement in Kupala's Žalejka (1908) lists her primer alongside a Cyrillic edition. Its title in a modern łacinka reading is Pieršaje čytańnie dla dzieťak biełarusaŭ; this is not a diplomatic transcription of the advertisement. [6]

Janka Kupala: Huślar (1910) is a concrete example of his poetry in Latin script. This does not make every edition of his work Latin-script: the inspected Žalejka (1908) has a Cyrillic main text. [6, 8]

Branisłaŭ Taraškievič: his school grammar appeared in Vilnius in 1918 in both scripts. He codified an existing language and writing tradition; he did not invent łacinka from nothing. [4]

A printed Latin edition is not automatically evidence of a Latin-script autograph.

Inside an old edition

You may encounter	Here we use
sz	š
cz	č
ż	ž
w	v

These are reading clues, not universal correction rules. Historical editions differ in both graphic conventions and spelling. [2, 8]

Record the author, title, date and script. Compare recurring words before calling an unfamiliar spelling a mistake.

Keep two lines in your notes: 'as printed' and 'my modern rendering'. Never silently modernize a quotation.

Łacinka is a script tradition.
Taraškievica is an orthographic system.

Letters · A to K

Latin	Cyrillic / reading cue
A a	а
B b	б
C c	ц
Ć ć	цб · soft c
Č č	ч
D d	д
E e	э
F f	ф
G g	г · a stop, distinct from h
H h	Belarusian р
I i	і
J j	й
K k	к

Correspondences: [2, 3]. Do not read e, c or j as English letters. The use of g for the separate stop sound depends on the word's orthographic treatment.

z / h · x / ch · r' / g

Letters · L to Ž

Latin	Cyrillic / reading cue
L l	soft л
Ł ł	hard л
M m	м
N n	н
Ń ń	нь
O o	о
P p	п
R r	р
S s	с
Ś ś	сь
Š š	ш
T t	т
U u	у
Ů ů	ў
V v	в
Y y	ы
Z z · Ž ž · Ž ž	з · зь · ж

Before a vowel, i may signal softness. The letter l is already soft. [2, 3]

Remember: ł = л, but ů = ў.

Letters working together

Combination	Example
ch = x	хата / chata
dz = дз	дзе / dzie
dź = дзь	мядзьведзь / miadźviedź
dž = дж	джэм / džem
šč = шч	шчупак / ščupak

Ch, dz and dź are stable combinations; šč represents a sequence of š + č. Dź marks softness. [2, 3]

Мядзьведзь is the classical spelling. Preserving modern мядзведзь gives miadzviedź instead. Keep the two source spellings distinct.

Read chata, džem and ščupak aloud; cover the examples and reconstruct their Cyrillic forms.

Caron: č, š, ž. Acute: ć, ń, ś, ź.

Breve: ŷ.

The cover letter: Ŭ

Cyrillic	Łacinka
Беларусь	Biełaruś
беларусаў	biełarusaŭ
слова	słova
слоў	słoŭ
быў	byŭ
воўк	voŭk

Latin Ŭ ŭ corresponds to Belarusian Ў ў. Its mark is a breve: a small curve, not a straight bar. The base letter is U, not Y. [2, 3]

Ў does not form a separate syllable. English w offers a rough starting point; listening to Belarusian speech is better. [3]

*У / u and ў / ŭ are different.
Notice the letter in a complete word.*

Ł and L

Hard л: ł	Soft л: l
лапа / łapa	лямпа / lampa
лук / łuk	люк / luk
школа / szkoła	школьны / školny
бусел / busieł	соль / sol

The last consonant in busieł is hard; in sol it is soft. Before i, soft л is written l. [2, 3]

After soft l, use а, е, о, u for я, е, ё, ю: ля / la, ле / le, лё / lo, лю / lu. Do not add an extra i mechanically.

If you know Polish, take special care: Belarusian ł here represents hard л, not the usual modern Polish pronunciation of ł.

лес / les • лёд / lod • людзі / ludzi

Softness: acute or i?

Cyrillic	Łacinka
соль	sol
конь	koń
сябар	siabar
ціха	cicha
восень	vosień
піць	pić

At a word's end, an acute can mark softness: дзень / dzień, конь / koń, пісаць / pisać. There is no separate letter for Ь. [2, 3]

Before a vowel, i usually does the work: ня / nia, ця / cia, ся / sia, зя / zia. Compare дзень / dzień with дня / dnia.

Do not add both an acute and i automatically. Check the consonant's position and the source spelling.

L is already soft: соль / sol.

Choosing j or i

Position	Writing
At the start	я / ja · е / je · ё / jo · ю / ju
After a vowel	мая / maja · знаю / znaju
After a consonant	ня / nia · не / nie · нё / nio · ню / niu
After soft l	ля / la · ле / le · лё / lo · лю / lu

A separate й before a vowel is written j. The apostrophe is therefore not copied mechanically: сям'я / siamja, аб'ява / abjava, надвор'е / nadvorje. [3]

Find the vowel, examine what precedes it, then check separately for l and for a distinct j sound.

яма / jama · мая / maja

няма / niama · лампа / lampa

One script, several choices

Modern source / rendering	Classical source / rendering
снег / snieh	сьнег / śnieh
свет / sviet	сьвет / śviet
песня / piesnia	песьня / pieśnia

Classical orthography marks assimilative softness in some positions where modern spelling does not. The difference may already exist in the Cyrillic source. [3, 4]

Choose a main approach for your notebook and label other spellings when quoting them.

Traditional łacinka is not identical to geographical romanization systems: its distinction between ł and l is one useful sign. [2, 9]

*Choose the source spelling first.
Then choose the letters.*

Words to keep

Cyrillic	Łacinka	English
бусел	busieł	stork
гняздо	hniazdo	nest
птушка	ptuška	bird
раніца	ranica	morning
восень	vosień	autumn
дрэва	dreva	tree
возера	voziera	lake
слова	słova	word
мова	mova	language
кніга	kniha	book
літара	litara	letter
дзякуй	dziakuj	thank you

Copy five words, then add one of your own. Stress is not marked here. Apply the rules on pages 10-17.

A first line:

бусел / busieł · гняздо / hniazdo

A stork by the house

Раніца. Каля хаты стаіць дрэва. На дрэве гняздо. У гняздзе бусел. Я гляджу на птушку і пішу ў кнізе: «Добры дзень!»

Ranica. Kala chaty staić dreva. Na drevie hniazdo. U hniazdie busieł. Ja hladžu na ptušku i pišu ў knizie: «Dobry dzień!»

Morning. A tree stands by the house. There is a nest in the tree and a stork in the nest. I look at the bird and write in the book: 'Good day!'

Original practice text, not a literary quotation. Find ch, dz, dž, soft l, ie and ŭ. Copy three words you recognized without the Cyrillic.

Why kala, but słowa?

The л in каля is soft; in слова it is hard.

Try it yourself

1. Write in łacinka: хата, бусел, гняздо, воўк, дзень, людзі.
2. Restore Cyrillic: mała, les, lod, dziakuj, vosień, pišu.
3. Insert ł or l: __uk (лук), __uk (люк), busie__ (бусел), so__ (соль).
4. Choose: яма - јама or іама? Няма - нјама or ніама? Мая - маја or маіа?
5. Write two sentences about a bird or a book. Start in Cyrillic, then use łacinka. Check each soft consonant.

Answers are on page 24.

Try first without the chart.

Look a little closer

6. Find the error: shata for хата; belarus for Беларусь; slova for слова.
7. Explain: u / ў; c / ч; s / ś / š.
8. Write in łacinka: сям'я, надвор'е, я, ця, лёд.
9. Preserve each source spelling: снег; сьнег; песня; песьня.
10. An old edition uses sz and w. Must its language be Polish? How would you check?

An unfamiliar spelling is an invitation to investigate.

Your answer key

1. chata, busieł, hniazdo, voŭk, dzień, ludzi.
2. мала, лес, лёд, дзякуй, восень, пішу.
3. łuk; luk; busieł; sol.
4. jama; niama; maja.
5. One answer: Гэта кніга. Тут бусел. / Heta kniha. Tut busieł.
6. chata; Biełaruś; słowa. Check x, ie, ł and final ś.
7. y / ў; ц / ч; с / съ / ш.
8. siamja, nadvorje, ja, cia, lod.
9. snieh; śnieh; piesnia; pieśnia.
10. No. These can be historical łacinka conventions. Check the language, title, date and edition.

Name the rule, then make one new example.

Letters by hand

Write slowly: Ũ ů · Ł ł · Ć ć · Ń ń · Ś ś · Ź ź · Č č · Š š · Ž ž.

Keep the curved breve, slanted acute and angled caron distinct. Do not let the stroke of ł disappear into a ruled line.

Then write busieł, hniazdo and Biełaruś. Add a date and a sentence of your own.

Date · subject · source

Leave room to change your mind.

Seven quiet sessions

Day	Ten minutes
1	Letters and five familiar words
2	Ŭ and u: notice the difference
3	ł and l: copy a short line
4	Ć, ń, ś, ź: final softness
5	J and i: five vowel examples
6	Read the stork passage aloud
7	Repeat the drills without help

Next, try a poem. Start with a few lines, not a whole anthology. Notice which letters now feel familiar.

Keep one question for later research.

Read a page. Discover why it looks the way it does.

Wind, falcon, and I

Вецер, і сокал, і я... / Viecier, i sokał, i ja...

This is the closest match to the book's theme: flight embodies a spirit that remains free despite constraint. The following excerpt follows the Cyrillic text in Kupala's collected works, volume 1 (1995), as presented by Belarusian Palichka. [12]

Як вецер, свабодны мой дух,
Хоць рукі закуты ў ланцуг.

Jak viecier, svabodny moj duch,
Choć ruki zakuty ў łancuh.

English sense: My spirit is free as the wind, though my hands are chained.

The łacinka here is our modern reading transcription, not a facsimile of an early edition. Other editions have a different second line; we do not mix them.

v i e c i e r · ŭ · ł

Notice ie, short ŭ and hard ł.

A prayer to the wind

Мая малітва / Maja malitva

Choose the poem beginning «Ба ўсяку мінуту...». Kupala wrote more than one poem with this title. This one addresses sun, wind, water, sky and the wider world. [13]

Малюся свабоднаму ветру—віхуры,
Што лётае птушкай ад краю да краю,

Malusia svabodnamu vietru—vichury,
Što lotaje ptuškaj ad kraju da kraju,

English sense: I pray to the free whirlwind, flying like a bird from one edge of the world to the other.

The Cyrillic excerpt follows the 1926 collected-edition text on Wikisource. The łacinka transcription and English sense are prepared for this reader; neither is presented as an original historical translation.

lëmae / lotaje · nmyшкай / ptuškaj
After soft l, ë becomes o.

Freedom and open space

СЫМОН-МУЗЫКА / Symon-muzyka

A longer narrative poem about a gifted musician. It offers a further reading path for the artist's longing for freedom and room to create. [14]

This edition provides a reading recommendation only. No passage from Kołas's poem, Latin-script transcription of a passage, or English translation of a passage is reproduced here.

Read the work in an available edition and record its title, publisher and date. Notice who is speaking, and how music changes the meaning of freedom in the scene.

In your own words, answer: What can art express that ordinary speech cannot? Does the musician seek escape, belonging, or both?

These are original discussion prompts, not quotations or translations. The linked source is in Cyrillic; this recommendation does not imply that it was originally printed in Latin letters.

Read first. Then describe the scene in your own words.

A little poetry notebook

Read for...	Begin with...
Inner freedom	Viecier, i sokał, i ja...
Sky and spiritual address	Maja malitva
An artist's longing	Symon-muzyka

This reading list pairs Kupala's poems with a recommendation to explore Kołas. The Kupala transcriptions were made for this book; the Kołas passage is not reproduced. A poet's connection with Latin-script publishing does not prove that every poem first appeared in that script.

For a historical Latin-script book, explore Kupala's Huślar (1910). Its spelling differs from this reader. Check the specific page rather than silently replacing the letters. [8]

For each new poem, keep four notes: author and title; edition; exact original lines; your own reading and response.

*What does flight mean here:
escape, discovery, return, or belonging?*

Sources to explore

[1] Volha Haryckaja, History of Belarusian Letters (2016).
letters.philology.by

[2] Belarusian Institute of Arts and Sciences, Canada: Transliteration. binim.org/index.php/transliteration/

[3] S. Aleksandrov and H. Mycyk: Belarusian alphabet, letters and sounds.
knihi.com/storage/padrucnik/alfabet_ru.htm

[4] Skaryna Library: Branisłaŭ Taraškievič and his grammar.
skaryna.org/be/branislau-taraskievic/

[5] Belarusian Literature textbook, Bahuševič section.
padruchnik.com/books/id01987s/book_0.pdf

[6] Žalejka (1908), publisher's advertisement, Wikisource.

[7] Belarusian Association of Journalists: Mužyckaja praŭda. baj.media

[8, 9] Supplementary script comparisons: Wikipedia. Historical Latin-page evidence: Hušlar (1910), Wikisource, page 64.

[10] MD PRODUCT: notebook dimensions. [11] Radosław Kaleta, Acta Albaruthenica 25 (2025): the reading busieł. DOI: 10.31338/2720-698Xaa.25.16.

Tap numbered references in this PDF to open sources. The accompanying website includes a Sources & editorial notes page.

Consult the edition, not only the title.

Poetry & print notes

[12] Kupała: Viecier, i sokał, i ja... Belarusian Palichka; collected works, vol. 1 (1995). knihi.com/Janka_Kupala/

[13] Kupała: Maja malitva, collected edition, vol. II (1926), Wikisource; opening: «Ва ўсяку мінуту...».

[14] Kołas: Symon-muzyka. knihi.com/Jakub_Kolas/Symon-muzyka.html

English explanations, Kupała transcriptions, glosses and exercises were prepared for this edition. Kołas is recommended, not quoted. Cover and stork illustrations are AI-generated.

Format: MD B6 Slim, 105 × 175 mm, confirmed by MD PRODUCT.
md-product.com/en/products/md-notebook-b6-slim

Print file: landscape A4, two pages per sheet, 100%, single-sided. Cut at the marks and stack in numerical order. Do not select booklet mode. For smaller pasted inserts, use 95%.

The information provided in this book is intended solely for educational and research purposes. It is not an official language standard. Consult the cited sources for historical and linguistic context.

Noto Sans and Noto Serif are embedded under the SIL Open Font License 1.1. No open-content licence is granted for the book; third-party rights and statutory exceptions remain unaffected.

Illustrated edition 0.5 · 25 September 2026.

Belarusian Lacinka

A small book with room for flight.